Hannah and Todd met in Prague in the summer of 1999 and married in 2001. Hannah continues to use her passion for teaching with her 5 kids, with women from her church in San Diego, and with other women leaders. She also writes occasionally for the Saturate Blog.

Todd and Hannah are currently helping to lead the training and coaching work started by the Soma Family of Churches called Saturate. Saturate helps church plants, as well as existing churches, to equip their people to live every day in light of their identity as Missionary Servants.

Saturate helps hundreds of churches in more than 30 countries like Japan, Korea, Chile, South Africa, Russia, and many in Eastern and Western Europe with training, coaching, resources, and strategic planning. Todd's role involves spending half of his time working with churches throughout North America and half working with churches around the world. This work is done through hours of video calls, as well as consistent trips to various countries for onsite training.
